Our Vision

A world shaped by love, compelled and informed by the Gospel.

Our Mission

To equip students and scholars to renew their communities with a faith as intelligent as it is courageous.

Laidlaw College is an evangelical, interdenominational tertiary institution committed to the provision of theological education throughout the whole of New Zealand. Laidlaw College has campuses in Henderson, Manukau and Christchurch – as well as distance learning options, that together offer students a great deal of flexibility in how they structure their study.

Laidlaw College is registered by the New Zealand Qualifications Authority (NZQA) under provisions of the 1989 Education Act and its amendments and is accredited to teach programmes listed in this handbook, all of which have been approved by the Authority.

WELCOME

Laidlaw College has been preparing people to serve the church and the world for over 95 years. The School of Social Practice draws together this immense legacy of Christian thought and practice with contemporary counselling and education theory to prepare students for work in these professions.

We understand Social Practice to represent the myriad of ways people work to bring about change in the world. In the School of Social Practice this is enacted through training people for work in education and counselling. This training reflects a commitment to faith, hope and love through a relational anthropology which values the transformational encounter that can be experienced in relationship with God, self and other.

Laidlaw College's Counselling programmes are concerned with personal, community and social renewal. We are inspired by the Gospel story to develop capacity to encounter one another in honest relationships, to assist people to overcome problems, and to engage in social systems so that people might enjoy the freedom to choose the stories they live by.

The Diploma in Relational Studies (leading to the Diploma in Christian Studies) is a one-year diploma which equips people to engage relationally with others in a range of work and life contexts. Students who complete the DipRS and meet all other criteria may staircase into the second year of the Bachelor of Counselling programme.

The Bachelor of Counselling is a three-year professional degree that equips graduates to work as professional counsellors. It is based on Person-Centred and Narrative therapeutic approaches. Graduates will develop a theologically-informed relational approach within these modalities.

We welcome applicants from all backgrounds who have a desire to work with people in a way that integrates their personal understanding of faith and God with professional counselling skills.

This programme is ideal for church workers and volunteers, people involved in community groups, or those considering a career in a caring profession, for example counselling, social work, community work, nursing, and teaching.

If you have an interest in the role theology might have in how we engage in relationship, want to make sense of some of what psychology can offer, and explore bicultural relational contexts then this programme is for you!

OUTLINE

This programme seeks to form theologically reflective professional counsellors. Theology wrestles not only with who God has revealed himself to be, but also with what it means to be human in relation to God. The BCouns has this dynamic at the heart of its curriculum.

Specifically, the Bachelor of Counselling programme draws on the theories and practices of Person-Centred and Narrative Therapy, equipping graduates in these modalities while also developing a relational approach that resonates with theologies of a relational God.

Formation is a vital component of the Bachelor of Counselling. Graduates of the programme have struggled with their own brokenness and beauty, and their relational strategies, as much as they have grappled with counselling concepts and techniques. Much of their learning happens in personal counselling and in group process, in which all students participate each semester. It is in these groups that deep and enduring formation takes place.

Bachelor of Counselling graduates have a rich understanding of personhood-in-relationship. Courses such as Personhood, Relationality and Faith have been designed intentionally to prepare them for this. They also have a rich sense of who they are and an eagerness to participate alongside others, particularly others who are experiencing suffering.

The Bachelor of Counselling is currently offered at the Henderson and Christchurch campuses.

OBJECTIVES

The Bachelor of Counselling programme is designed to equip students with a range of counselling skills; teach them to critically engage with a range of counselling theories; and develop their ability to integrate these with a relational theological approach, in order to prepare them for professional practice. It is designed for students who want to integrate Christian faith with a range of sound, well-established counselling theories and practical skills, in order to enter into community, church-based or private practice. The degree has a common core of biblical, theological and philosophical studies which provides a foundation for a deep appreciation of the Scriptures and the outworking of the gospel in life and professional practice. The programme meets the criteria established for provisional membership of the professional associations for counsellors in New Zealand, the NZAC and the NZCCA.

GRADUATE PROFILE

Bachelor of Counselling graduates will be:

- Educated in preparation for provisional membership of the New Zealand Association of Counsellors and the New Zealand Christian Counsellors Association, in a variety of health, social service and educational settings.
- Equipped with an approach to counselling that draws from Person-Centred and Narrative Therapies, and emphasises relationality.
- Proficient at articulating a well-integrated theological anthropology, developed from the study of the sacred Christian Scriptures and traditions, history, culture and the social sciences that understands people as persons-in-relationship, people of dignity who are formed through and for loving relationship.
- Practiced at relationally engaging with people including their emotions, cognitive processes, meaning-making and social positioning.
- Skilled with a range of reflective practices including self, peer and clinical supervision.
- Prepared for postgraduate study and research.

PROGRAMME INFORMATION

Study Locations

The BCouns is offered in Henderson and Christchurch. The programme is not available to be studied by distance.

Period of Study – Full-Time/Part-Time

This programme is normally completed on a full-time basis over three years. It can also be undertaken on a part-time basis after consultation with the Head of Programme, but it must be completed within a time frame of eight years unless special permission is granted by the National Academic Committee. In the event of extended absence from the programme returning students may be required to undertake a supplementary course of study to ensure currency of practice.

Part-time study as an option can only be approved by the Head of Programme and a formal study plan will be put in place, as part of the approval process.

Mid-year Intake

Entry into the BCouns programme at mid-year can be on a part-time basis only and it may be the expectation that any new enrolment will be moving to full-time from the start of the following year, unless the option to concurrently study towards another award is taken up. Any intention to continue part-time is after consultation and approval by the Head of Programme.

Academic Year Structure

Please refer to the 2019 Key Dates on the inside back cover of this handbook.

Schedule of Courses and Dates

A schedule is provided during orientation which includes all the course dates, the Marae visit and any other relevant dates. Students are responsible for ensuring they are aware of information which applies to their course of study.

“Studying the BCouns allowed me to see how my interactions with my family were not what they could be. Laidlaw equipped me to mend problematic ways of interacting, to be more sensitive to the needs of others, aware of their feelings and careful not to overstep boundaries”

Maysoon Rassam
Counsellor in Private Practice

“I now bring a relational stance to my work. I see that in order for a company to reach its goals, the people who work there and their personal lives need to be taken seriously. The counselling and relational skills I developed are really useful. I listen well and people know they can trust me. I allow them space and they know they are important.”

Shona Wilson

Consultant, Suncorp Group

Laidlaw College Orientation

Orientation takes place in the first week of each semester. New and returning students are required to attend. Orientation is a time in which we welcome you to College, introduce you to people, give you tips to make your study easier, and help (re) orient you to the journey ahead. In addition to the general Laidlaw Orientation, the School of Social Practice has time set aside during orientation week in which important information regarding courses and programme structure is discussed, so it is imperative that students attend. You will receive details about Orientation once you are accepted into the programme.

Workload and Programme Structure

Full-time study requires a commitment of at least 40 hours per week. Part-time work needs to be carefully considered particularly in Years Two and Three with practicum commitments.

- Group Process meetings are held weekly for all students taking core courses. The timing of these groups is worked out by the School and there is little flexibility, therefore students must not take on outside commitments until they know the day/time of their group process. This information should be available by the end of the SSP orientation day.
- Practicum work (200 hours over Years Two and Three) is a requirement and may involve more than one placement.
- A Marae visit (attached to the 907.515 Bicultural Relationships course) is normally undertaken in Year One and involves a weekend stay on a Marae in the second semester. Dates will be provided and there is a nominal cost.
- Courses are currently not recorded by Laidlaw and cannot be accessed by virtual technology.

Group Process

All students participate in group process which is an important part of the programme. Groups are linked to the core courses and are held weekly for 2 ½ hours. The 80% attendance rule applies to groups and any absence must be explained before the group start time, i.e. in the case of sickness a student is expected to call the office before the group begins as a courtesy. Most groups are held on either Monday or Tuesday, so students are advised not to make commitments on these days until they are sure of their group process time.

Attendance

The minimum attendance requirement for block courses is 75%, while all weekly courses and group process have a 80% minimum attendance requirement.

Practicum Work

In Years Two and Three of the programme students are required to obtain a placement within an organisation approved by the Practicum Coordinator.

- There are a total of 200 counselling hours of practicum work to complete during the two years of practicum.
- Practice hours may not be logged until the placement and supervision contracts have been completed by all parties and returned to the SSP office.
- Bridging students who wish to use current employment for practicum hours must be approved by the Practicum Coordinator. Please note that private practice work will only be used for a portion of the practicum hours, to be negotiated with the Practicum Coordinator.
- Practice hours, supervision and assignment work MUST be undertaken concurrently. Therefore if for any reason a student needs to suspend practice during the course, they must also suspend supervision and all assignment work.
- In normal circumstances, students are expected to complete the specified number of practice hours, and associated reflective practices, by the end of semester due date.

- In the event that some of the practice hours have not been completed by the due date (therefore associated reflective practice assignments are not able to be completed by the due date), the counselling log showing hours completed and the associated reports will still be submitted in the usual way.
  - If 50% or more of the required practice hours have been completed within the first semester of enrolment, upon application an extension of up to one additional semester may be granted. A grade of IP (In Progress) will be given and updated only after the full requirements have been met.
  - If less than 50% of the required practice hours have been completed within the first semester of enrolment, a meeting with the Head of Programme must be organised, and an application for extension must be received before the due date.
- If after two semesters of enrolment in the course the required practice hours and associated reflective practices have not been completed, the course will be given a DNC (did not complete) grade. In this event, a student would need to re-enrol in the course when it is next offered. Carrying hours already obtained forward to the new course would be discussed with the Practicum Coordinator.
- When there are outstanding practice hours at the end of 932.730 Practicum (B), students will complete the Application for Extension of Practicum Hours form and complete their practice, until the hours are met. This will require that they continue to participate in group supervision to support their ongoing reflective practice and make a payment of $240 to cover additional administrative costs.
- It is expected that all counselling work audio or video recorded as part of assessments in 904.715 Integrated Practice (A), 905.715 Integrated Practice (B), 932.730 Practicum (A), and 933.730 Practicum (B) will be carried out in an official New Zealand language.

Limit on Study Load

Please refer to the General Information and Regulations section of the Handbook for information about students' responsibilities regarding how their study load affects their eligibility for student loans and allowances. This document is available online at www.laidlaw.ac.nz/gen-regs

Independent Learning Plan: Review process to identify and work with students not meeting expected learning trajectories

The purpose of an independent learning plan is to formalise processes to support students who are not achieving at an expected level. It may also be used to support students achieving marginal pass grades in the hope of provisioning them to achieve at a higher level.

Students may be identified on the basis of their grades – C or below – or other factors impacting on her/his ability to undertake safe and effective counselling practice to the level expected in relation to where they are in the programme.

Identified students will be invited to a review meeting preferably with two Counselling Programme faculty members. The review meeting aims to develop a learning plan that might include remedial video and transcript work, changes in placement or supervision arrangements, recommendations or requirements for personal counselling.

Staff carrying out review meetings will have the responsibility to ensure student files are kept up-to-date with notes from meetings and individual plans and goals agreed upon. They also have the responsibility to report back in Counselling Programme faculty meetings where necessary.

Student Support

Laidlaw's academic support is managed by the Centre for Learning (CFL). CFL provides academic support for all students, including those who are studying Counselling. Their main goal is to help you succeed in your studies. If you need help with an assignment, essay writing, referencing, time management, exam preparation or how to study effectively then you should contact student support for assistance. They also hold workshops throughout the year to help you in your study.

Modes of Delivery

*Mode 1	weekly daytime or evening lectures over one semester. May involve videoconference delivery.
Mode 2	intensive blocks of teaching with required reading prior to and following the teaching session. May involve video conference delivery.
Mode 3	intensive blocks of teaching, with required reading and/ or assignments prior to and following the teaching session, plus a group process workshop held weekly over the course of the semester (12 weeks).
Mode 4	intensive blocks of teaching plus practicum placement (which begins in the same semester as the block course, and ends when the required practicum hours have been completed).

\ some courses may not be on a strictly weekly basis*

GENERAL INFORMATION

BICULTURAL UNDERSTANDING

Laidlaw College believes strongly in the fostering of bicultural understanding as part of its affirmation of the implications of the Treaty of Waitangi. Students involved in undergraduate programmes generally include the Laidlaw-arranged Marae visit in their programme of study.

In preparation for the Marae visit, students attend a series of classes designed to equip them with a basic understanding of Te Reo and Tikanga, in order that they can participate in the formal protocols of the marae. This is a structured part of the 907.515 Bicultural Relationships course.

COURSE NUMBERING AND CREDIT SYSTEM

The Laidlaw course numbering system follows this pattern:

- The first digit indicates the field of study (e.g. 1 = Biblical Studies, 8 = Education, 9 = Counselling).
- The second and third digits further define the level and/or subject area (e.g. 120 = Old Testament).
- The first digit after the decimal point indicates the National Qualifications Framework level.
- The second and third digits after the decimal point indicate the credit value of the course (e.g. 15 = 15 credits, 30 = 30 credits).
- One credit is equivalent to ten hours of learning. A 15 credit course = 150 hours of learning.

COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

215.515 Beginning Theology

This course introduces students to the theological reflection, providing opportunities for students to develop basic skills for working with biblical texts and theological ideas and applying those skills in everyday contexts.

271.615 Gospel & Culture

This course introduces students to theological integration by exploring how the Gospel, rooted in the Biblical narrative, informs all areas of life in contemporary culture and society. Students are introduced to tools and techniques to faithfully “read the signs of the times” in both Aotearoa New Zealand and global contexts, and to evaluate how the Gospel might be expressed authentically and creatively across disciplines and contexts.

401.515 Formation

This course aims to help students’ spiritual formation, through engagement with Scripture and a variety of Christian spiritual traditions, reflection on their own and others’ foundations experiences, and the development of spiritual practices for life and vocation.

857.515 Human Development

Mode 1

This course surveys contemporary understandings of human development in conversation with Christian theological descriptions of being human.

900.515 Foundations of Relational Practice (A) Mode 3

The conviction that people are best understood as “persons-in-relationship” has implications for the therapeutic approach adopted by the counsellor. This course is the first of six that form a core counselling practice development stream through the Bachelor of Counselling. The course combines theological and theoretical reflection with skill development and group-process workshops. It begins to develop a set of core person-centred practices aimed at I-Thou engagement that emphasise the restoration of self-awareness and the enriching of dialogical relationships.

901.515 Foundations of Relational Practice (B) Mode 3

Pre-requisite: 900

This second course in the core counselling practice development stream enriches the student’s understanding of “person-in-relationship”, by combining theological and theoretical reflection, with deepening person-centred and associated skill development and group process workshops. It enriches the student’s ability to consider such issues as anxiety and depression.

902.615 Relational Theories & Practice (A) Mode 3

Pre-requisite: 901

Key to a relational approach to counselling is the therapeutic relationship, or encounter, during which counsellor and client create a relational canvas upon which the change and growth can be sketched and explored. This third course in the core counselling practice development stream expands the student’s understanding of this encounter, and introduces narrative therapy as a means of assisting people to engage the social dimension of their lives. It explores the place of “story” in personal meaning-making, and advances skill development in a classroom and the group process workshop.

903.615 Relational Theories & Practice (B) Mode 3

Pre-requisite: 902

People are formed through their relational encounters and the social discourses that guide these. Persons-in-relationship are also “storied” people – stories give shape and meaning to their worlds and experiences. The fourth course in the core counselling practice development stream develops students’ knowledge of personhood and practice skills within a narrative therapeutic framework.

904.715 Integrated Practice (A)

Mode 3

Pre-requisite: 903

Relational breakdown and dysfunction have psychological, social and theological foundations. The fifth course in the core counselling practice development stream develops the skills to identify where and how relationality has been damaged and where people have intentionally, or unintentionally, developed ways of relating that are damaging to themselves and others. It combines practice, theoretical, and theological reflection with group-based learning, and enriches the student's ability to practice counselling in a personally and theoretically integrated way.

905.715 Integrated Practice (B)

Mode 3

Pre-requisite: 904

The hope of the therapeutic relationship is the restoration of people's understanding of themselves as persons-in-relationship, and their freedom to love and trust in ways that are creative, adventurous, embracing, life-giving and expansive. The sixth course in the core counselling practice development stream helps students further develop and apply a meta-theory of integration that allows them to plumb key psychological and theological insights, personal experience and style, and practices drawn from a range of modalities. It combines practice with theoretical and theological reflection within a group process setting.

906.515 Personhood, Relationality & Faith

Mode 1

This foundational course introduces counselling as a therapeutic relational engagement that finds its context, and its goal, in knowledge of God and humanity drawn from the story of Christ. From this critical standpoint it engages with a broad range of counselling theories and models of practice.

907.515 Bicultural Relationships

Mode 2

This course introduces students to personal and corporate responsibilities and obligations under the bicultural agreement Te Tiriti O Waitangi including ministry practices using Tikanga Maori and Te Reo Maori. Students will participate in the Noho Marae overnight..

908.715 Counselling & Diversity

Understanding ourselves as "persons-in-relationship" requires us to view others as constituted by the interrelationships to which they contribute and by which they are formed. This course explores the impact of persons from different genders, cultures, ethnic and social groupings coming together, and the implications of these dynamics on people and their relationships, including the therapeutic encounter. Developing research skills, it combines theological and theoretical reflection with a study of historical developments in New Zealand society, and an engagement with contemporary social issues that impact our sense of identity.

910.515 Relational Psychology A

Mode 2

Persons-in-relationship not only find their ultimate joy in relationships but also their deepest insecurities and brokenness. This course proposes a theoretical and theological framework that views brokenness in relationality as an important contributing factor to disorder. Upon this theoretical ground, the course introduces a range of human experiences including sexuality, grief, and depression that are foundational to counsellor understanding of how people heal and grow.

911.615 Relationships & Family/Whanau

Mode 1

Families/whanau, understood as unique and culturally-representative relational systems, provide a primary context for the formation of persons-in-relationship. This course combines theoretical and theological reflection in order to explore these family/whanau dynamics and develop strategies for therapeutically engaging with people within the context of their family/whanau relationships.

913.615 Counselling Children & Young People

Mode 1

Pre-requisite: 901 Co-requisite: 902 & 930

The aim of this course is to form professional counselling practices for working with children and young people in agency and school settings. The course is designed to complement Laidlaw's broad counsellor education programme's emphasis on relational personhood through providing a coherent understanding of child development, within family/whanau and wider social contexts. The course includes a strong practice development component in which different child counselling approaches, such as skills in working with adolescents and families, are taught and practiced. This course also gives an overview of ways of understanding and working with adolescents, and the professional and practice challenges as well as opportunities of school and agency settings.

914.615 Relational Psychology B

Pre-requisite: 910

Mode 2

This course introduces a working knowledge of the current edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM) and explores its use and the effects of diagnostic labels that may foreclose on the possibility for change in relationships. The course develops counsellor understandings of a number of human experiences including those introduced in Relational Psychology A, relational abuses (including sexual), eating disorders, and addictions. The course seeks to assist students to integrate these understandings into their professional practice.

921.6/715 Theology of Suffering & Hope

Mode 1

This course explores questions about human suffering and the God who engages with humans at the level of their despair. It engages with how the Scriptures acknowledge human suffering, and looks at hope from a biblical, theological, anthropological and relational perspective.

930.615 Professional Practice (A)

Mode 4

Co-requisite: 902

A well-integrated understanding of ethical counselling practice and the ability to reflect robustly on this is fundamental to offering clients the safety to encounter self and others. This course introduces professional practice and requires students to reflect on 30 hours of counselling practice in a practicum placement.

931.615 Professional Practice (B)

Mode 4

Pre-requisite: 930 Co-requisite: 903

Key to a relational approach to counselling is the therapeutic relationship, or encounter. The counsellor must develop the ability to critically reflect on their contribution to this therapeutic relationship. This course advances professional practice and requires students to reflect on 50 hours of counselling practice, and 8 hours of clinical supervision, in a practicum placement.

932.730 Practicum (A)

Mode 4

Pre-requisite: 931 Co-requisite: 904

Central to a relational approach to counselling is the therapeutic relationship. It is in the context of this relationship, and on the basis of the trust that has developed, that the counsellor is able to invite the client to an awareness of themselves and others as relationally constituted and impacted persons. This course requires students to experience 60 hours of practicum placement (plus preparation, reading and reporting), in order to integrate theoretical, theological and personal reflections, as well as development of skills and process.

933.730 Practicum (B)

Mode 4

Pre-requisite: 932 Co-requisite: 904 or 905

The counselling process is an opportunity for the counsellor and client, in a therapeutic relational encounter, to identify where disordered relationality has resulted in life-restricting behaviours. It is also an opportunity to identify where relationality has been linked to joy and hope, and how these might be restored and enhanced. This course requires students to experience a further 60 hours of practicum placement (plus preparation and reporting), and to critically reflect on their integration of theoretical and theological learning, as well as their development of skills and practical approaches.

He is leaning forward, looking intently at the screen. The woman, on the right, has long dark hair and is wearing a dark top. She is also looking at the screen with a slight smile. The background is a wall with a decorative pattern of dark leaves on a reddish-brown background. A semi-transparent blue box is overlaid on the bottom left of the image, containing the text.
