The screenshot shows the ProQuest Religion Advanced Search interface. At the top, there are navigation tabs: Basic, Advanced (highlighted), Topics, Publications, and My Research (0 marked items). Below the tabs, it says "Databases selected: ProQuest Religion". The main section is titled "Advanced Search" and includes a "Tools" menu with "Search Tips" and "Browse Topics". The search area contains three rows of input fields. The first row has the text "Justice and mercy" in the search box and "Abstract" selected in the dropdown menu. The second and third rows have "AND" in the operator dropdown and "Citation and abstract" in the dropdown menu. Below the search rows are "Add a row" and "Remove a row" links, and "Search" and "Clear" buttons. At the bottom of the search area, there is a "Date range:" dropdown set to "All dates" and "Limit results to:" checkboxes for "Full text documents only" and "Scholarly journals, including peer-reviewed" (with an "About" link). A "More Search Options" link is at the bottom left. Red circles and arrows highlight the "Abstract" dropdown and the "Date range" and "Limit results to" section, with text boxes explaining these choices.

Choose to search just the Abstract

Limit the results to a specified Date Range as well as Full Text or Scholarly Journals

- When using ProQuest Religion always go to the Advanced search as this gives more options to refine a search.
- Search for the terms “Justice and Mercy” in the Abstract – select this from the drop down menu.
- Limit the results to a specific Date Range. Results can be further limited by selecting Full Text or Scholarly Journals.

Abstract (Summary)

Perhaps this is why we say that the dead rest in peace, because they at last have been freed from the harsher strictures of the world - all the courts and tribunals and laws and wars and administrative systems and policies and plans and statements and codes and penalties - freed from all this travail, across the centuries, in which humans have tried to live justly together. Whoever wants to eliminate love is eliminating...the very thing that the suffering person - every person - needs: namely, loving personal concern,55 If we could be more aware of the need for social mercy, if we could speak more readily of social mercy, if we could let the language and the sentiments of social mercy hold greater sway in our society and our institutions and our social structures, we would in no way jeopardise our quest for social justice.

Abstract
This essay is a meditative exploration of the relationship between justice and mercy. While it recognises the importance of social justice - as a mutual indebtedness - it argues that without social mercy, even justice itself cannot save us. Mercy is not the opposite or complement of justice, but its very condition.

"Go and learn what this means, ? desire mercy, not sacrifice".

(Matthew 9:13)

JUSTICE AND MERCY.
