The course involves a detailed discussion of the book of Philippians and its relevance for today. Attention is paid to secondary literature, especially recent secondary literature to foster interaction with current discussion. In addition, students are encouraged to relate the key issues in Philippians with the contemporary Christian scene today. Students will be encouraged to read a range of introductory material before the course generally acquainting them with the issues related to the interpretation of Philippians. These issues will be discussed in the first part of the lecture program. The remaining time will be spent working through the text of Philippians, pericope by pericope and verse by verse. At times there will be pauses to discuss an issue at hand in terms of the broader redemptive story, theology and especially the other letters of Paul. After each pericope time will be spent discussing and applying what has been presented to today's world.

In addition to the lecturers, the course will include sessions from leading TAT scholars from around the world.
